BELGIUM EXTENDS ALERT

1 Belgium said it faced a serious and imminent threat of a Paris-style attack, and kept Brussels on maximum alert on Monday as security forces searched for militants thought to be at large in the capital. Prime Minister Charles Michel said the capital's metro, universities and schools would be closed on Monday. REUTERS

FATAL LANDSLIDE

2 A Nearly 100 bodies have been pulled from a landslide near a jade mine in Myanmar's northern Kachin State, local officials said on Sunday, and hopes are dwindling that any of an estimated 100 people missing will be found alive. The landslide happened when a mountain of mining debris gave way in the early hours of Saturday in Hpakant, an area that produces some of the world's highest-quality jade. The mines and debris dump sites are hazardous and deadly accidents are common. REUTERS

REPORTER SENTENCED

3 An Iranian court has sentenced Washington Post reporter Jason Rezaian to a prison term, the state news agency said on Sunday quoting the judiciary spokesman, a case that is a sensitive issue in contentious U.S.-Iranian relations. The length of the prison term was not specified. REUTERS

HYDE PARK FIRE INJURES 7

4 Seven people were injured in a four-alarm fire at a multi-family home at 9 Greenwood Avenue in Hyde Park on Saturday night. Two firefighters, three adult residents and two children were hospitalized with injuries that weren't considered life-threatening, a fire department spokesman said. METRO

MIDWEST EARLY SNOW

5 A heavy fall snowstorm hit the Midwest, blanketing states from South Dakota to Wisconsin with as much as 16 inches of snow, slowing air travel and delaying some events for U.S. presidential candidates. The storm was forecast to travel east into the Great Lakes region, reaching Michigan and upstate New York, according to the National Weather Service. It forecast widespread accumulations of 4 to 8 inches of snow. Forecasters warned that trees that had not already dropped their leaves could be damaged by the heavy, wet snow. REUTERS

ARMORY GUNS FOUND

6 Three of the military weapons stolen from a Worcester armory have been recovered in New York. A homeless man discovered the firearms in a duffel bag while picking through bottles in a park near Yankee Stadium, according to multiple reports. Inside the bag officers found an M-4 rifle and two 9mm pistols. SPENCER BUELL

Old-school gamers flocking to Bit Fest

Nomadic pop-up vintage arcade company eyeing a beer-and-games bar of its own.

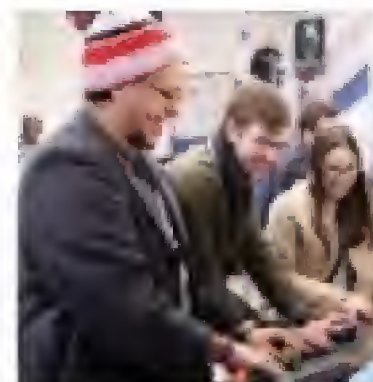

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroBOS
spencer.buell@metro.us

For a swarm of video game fans, it was joystick-jostling heaven on Earth at POP Allston on Sunday.

Spanning four floors, there was lots to sample: the latest in Boston indie games, a booth doling out stuffed Pokemon characters, another one selling vintage Nintendo cartridges (aged, and priced, like fine wine).

But the meet-up's centerpiece was a patch of 20 vintage arcade machines, carefully resurrected and ready to play, just like the good old days. A $5 entry fee earned visitors free-for-all play, no quarters required.

It was the latest stop for Bit Fest, the pop-up, beer-supplemented celebration of gaming history making its way around Boston.

Over the past 11 months the Bit Fest team has been lugging the games to Bit Fest nights at local breweries, Aeronaut in Somerville and Night Shift in Everett, where organizers claim as many as 100 have waited in line to get in.

"Nostalgia is huge right now, of course," said Joshua Allen, Bit Fest's co-owner and head technician, who said he's amassed and tinkered with nearly 70 vintage game rigs. His holdings include "Mortal Kombat II" (1993), "Donkey Kong" (1981) and "Asteroids" (1976).

"Everyone loves the idea of, 'Man I remember this from when I was a kid, I haven't seen this in 15 years. Oh boy,'" he said.

It's a labor of love for now. Ticket sales mostly support buying more machines and hard-to-find parts, Allen said.

But Bit Fest has been so successful that its five-member team of owners have begun dreaming of leveling up: opening their own brick-and-mortar beer-and-games bar in Boston.

Allen said Bit Fest plans to announce its master plan by the end of the year.

New highs for the women in weed biz

As marijuana laws change across the country, there's a group out there making sure that women get a seat at the table.

DAN KELLEY
@MetroPhilly
dan.kelley@metro.us

In an upstairs bar in Philadelphia's Headhouse Square neighborhood in early November, Stephanie Thomas stood in front of a group of roughly two dozen with a simple message.

"This industry is never going to be this small again," Thomas said.

She was talking about the marijuana industry. And in Pennsylvania, quite simply, there is no industry — at least no legal one.

But as legalization of marijuana moves across the country, Thomas is on the forefront of a movement that is trying to make sure women get in on the ground floor in what they are betting is a sure thing: legalization for recreational users in the not-too-distant future.

"Women are under-represented in management positions in the majority of industries across the country," Thomas said. "But in this industry, the door is wide open for everyone."

With several states, including New York and Massachusetts, implementing medical marijuana and others expected to allow recreational marijuana in coming years, one industry observer, The Arcview Group has predicted that the cannabis industry is expected to group four-fold between 2015 and 2019, to $10.9 billion — a size that is roughly double the U.S. vodka market.

Thomas is a co-chair of the Philadelphia chapter of Women Grow, a year-old organization focusing on women in weed that

Shanel Lindsay, CEO of Ardent Cannabis. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

"The women coming into the industry are particularly sophisticated. These are women with backgrounds in law, tech and finance."

Meyer

has sprouted 35 chapters across the country, including in Boston and New York.

They see opportunity not just in growing and distributing the plant itself, but in tools for wellness, tech startups, accounting, finance, real estate and accessories — all businesses that don't involve touching the plant.

"I've always loved cannabis," said Shanel Lindsay, the founder of Boston-based Ardent Cannabis, the maker of a machine called the Nova that uses heat to convert the main psychotropic compound in marijuana to an edible form.

There are strong indications that women already play a significant role in the industry. One survey by Marijuana Business Daily found that 36 percent of cannabis company executives are women. The average for all U.S. businesses is about 22 percent, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

"A big part of this business is mainstreaming this product," Lindsay said. "When these companies have a strong woman on their team, it's easy for her to take that leadership role."

Jane West, a founder of Women Grow, noted that the survey relied on voluntary responses of businesses, so the numbers may not be accurate as women find their footing in the industry.

"At my very first networking event, not only did I not know anyone there, I didn't know what they were talking about," West said.

"The industry is male dominated," said Melissa Meyer, a New York City-based founder of HealthMJ, a website that provides information about the use of marijuana to treat a range of illnesses. "That was true when it was in the black market. But the women coming into the industry are particularly sophisticated. These are women with backgrounds in law, tech and finance." Meyer has a law degree from Georgetown, but doesn't practice.

Still, there's a stigma over the industry that may mask how many women are actually in the business. People and companies who operate in the marijuana industry don't mention it on their LinkedIn pages, she said. And at a recent meeting of Women Grow, a representative of an accounting business seeking to provide services to the cannabis industry declined to be interviewed, in part because they didn't want to scare off conservative clients.

Despite those concerns, entrepreneurs are using networks like Women Grow to find capital they need to start businesses.

That is leading them to the door of Jessica Geran, director of corporate finance at Boston-based Dutchess Capital, one of the few financiers that has been active and open about their investments in the industry.

"The whole marijuana thing was a side project," Geran said. "It's [now] 75 percent of what we do on a daily basis."

Most of the investments are relatively small — in part because legal marijuana markets, medicinal and otherwise, are confined to the states in which they operate.

That has created room for everybody, including women.

"There's no established CEOs no big-time guys in suits," Geran said. "It's just a matter of being the best."

Sofia Vergara and Joe Manganiello tie the knot

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

After a year of what feels like an unprecedented number of celebrity divorces, finally some news from the other end of the relationship spectrum: Sofia Vergara and Joe Manganiello have gone and done what they've been threatening to do all year — get married. The very tall, very attractive couple tied the knot at the Breakers Palm Beach Resort in Florida Sunday afternoon following a lavish weekend of festivities, according to CNN. Vergara and Manganiello got engaged almost a year ago in December after six months of dating, so this is some impressive swiftness.

The Kardashian J.V. locker room was abuzz this weekend with news that Kylie Jenner dumped Tyga on his 26th birthday. It all apparently went down because of "something Tyga did," according to E! News. "They are on a

Justin Bieber re-romances Selena Gomez

Just when she thought she was out, he pulls her back in. Justin Bieber was spotted out at the bar at the Montage Hotel in Beverly Hills this weekend with none other than ex-girlfriend Selena Gomez — who just wrapped up an extended press tour filled with interviews about how she's finally moving on from their tumultuous relationship. But perhaps talking about it so much got her back into the idea. Or maybe it's Bieber's seduction techniques: An eyewitness spotted Bieber serenading Gomez with "My Girl" at their table — and shared video on Instagram. Ew, gross. Also, why was there a piano player and a mic at the ready for his impromptu performance? One more thing: Now Bieber has ruined "My Girl" for me — both the song and the Anna Chlumsky movie. Sheesh.

What a difference 13 years makes

Chiwetel Ejiofor takes on playing an FBI agent at two different points in his life.

NED EHRLBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

For "Secret in Their Eyes," Chiwetel Ejiofor teams up with Nicole Kidman and Julia Roberts and takes on a unique acting challenge: playing the same character — an antiterrorism agent searching for a killer — during two distinct periods of his life, 13 years apart. While a little gray in the temples certainly helped, Ejiofor found some other unique ways to distinguish the two versions of himself.

What was it about this character that really interested you?

Julia Roberts and Chiwetel Ejiofor are on the hunt for a killer in "Secret in Their Eyes." KAREN BALLARD

I liked the idea of dealing with this character in two different time periods, thereby being able to reflect and engage with the obsessional qualities that he has. I'm sure it's a part of his character anyway, but these circumstances that he's in kind of highlight his propensity to become obsessed. It becomes a very interesting story about this guy's psychology, the demons at play within him.

Did you do any work for yourself as far as what his life was like in between? Yeah, I mean, building a sort of background for him and what his life was — his romantic life and his professional life — and just sort of filling in the gaps of that was really helpful. But the main event for him is that there's like a sound that he can't get rid of. I thought of it as almost literal, almost kind of a ringing sound that he could never escape. He has the knowledge that the only way he'll ever get past or get through it is by finding the guy who did the [crime]. So the main thing for him in that time is that he cannot break free of this obsession, this need.

If you're imagining an actual ringing in your ears, does that drive you crazy by the end of the shoot?

[Laughs] Yeah, I mean if it were to really manifest. It's obviously metaphorical, but there's definitely a sense of that with him. And that's why I think when he starts to confront the guy, it just takes on its own quality.

On a purely cosmetic note, how do you differentiate the older and younger versions of your character? Hopefully that does come through. [Laughs] It certainly was attempted. But it's not a time period where there's a massive difference. If I think of myself 13 years ago, I think I would look a little different but — I hope — not significantly. You're sort of relying on the nature of how he has been thinking and whether that is physically manifested — the nature of this obsession and how it has burdened him and weighed down on him is what has made him older. He's kind of grown up with that. I mean, I can see it. I don't know if anybody else can.

HOW TO GET AHEAD

Teaching cultural understanding

An educational program brings classrooms in the Middle East and America together.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

There's a lot of debate happening across the U.S. about the Middle East — particularly in the wake of terrorist attacks in Paris and Beirut and due to the current Syrian refugee crisis. And as the arguments rage on, it's clear there's still so much Americans don't understand about the region — and vice versa.

Bridges of Understanding wants to narrow that gap. The nonprofit organization, launched in 2007, is bringing American high school and middle school students together with their peers in the Arab world through videoconferences and cross-cultural exchanges.

"As regions, we've been a constant presence in each other's lives but in this way that's been purely rooted in war and unrest," says Executive Director Faisal Al-Juburi. "But once these kids start reading about each other and having conversations, they're like, 'You know, at the end of the day, we're all going to school and trying to do right by ourselves and our friends and family — and we all listen to Taylor Swift.'" classroom is prepped ahead of time with a History of the Arab World 101 — Middle Eastern students get an American history primer — before exploring issues such as media bias, global citizenship and human rights. The two schools then participate in an hour-long videoconference.

How it works: Bridges of Understanding pairs a classroom in the U.S. with one from, say, Egypt or Saudi Arabia. Each U.S.

A middle school program launched earlier this year in partnership with NextLesson.org provides 11 lesson plans guiding students through the relationship between Arab and Western cultures, such as the influence of Arabic music on American pop.

Al-Juburi says many students go on to study international relations or global affairs in college. "They get intrigued about this whole concept of a world beyond the U.S. That's a major priority for us in all our programming — how we use the art of storytelling to humanize the 'other' so that construct ceases to exist."

3 things to watch for as Pats host suddenly surging Bills

The Bills have won two division games in a row and are back in the playoff mix.

JAMES TOSCANO
@Jimmy_Toscano
sports@metro.us

The Patriots (9-0) and Bills (5-4) will meet again Monday (8:30 p.m., ESPN), which means old friend Rex Ryan makes his return to Foxboro — this time with a different team from New York. In the first go-around this season, the Patriots handed Ryan a loss — something they've done plenty of times since he got his first head-coaching job with the Jets. New England went up big against the Bills in Buffalo in Week 2, and held them off after a Buffalo fourth quarter charge.

Chandler Jones and the Patriots dumped Richie Incognito and the Bills back in Week 2. GETTY IMAGES

It was business as usual — Bill Belichick got his win, and Ryan went back to the drawing board.

Here are three keys to the game:

1 REPLACING EDELMAN

Trick headline — you don't replace Edelman. In fact, Tom Brady and Bill Belichick have both said that Edelman can't be replaced, which is a bit unusual to hear, but does speak to the importance of the slot man. One player might not be able to fill Edelman's shoes, but Danny Amendola, Rob Gronkowski, Brandon LaFell and the rest of the offense should be able to figure it out. The Pats

For more Patriots coverage, visit metro.us always do.

2 DUAL BILLS

You usually only go as far as your quarterback can take you in the NFL. The Bills hope that isn't true. It isn't that quarterback Tyrod Taylor isn't good enough to win, it's just that the Bills are clearly a team focused on their running game. With LeSean McCoy and rookie Karlos Williams, the Bills are second in the NFL in rushing yards, averaging 142.3 per game. But the Patriots are second in the NFL in rushing defense, allowing just 88.2 per game. Something is going to give on Monday, and if the Patriots jump out to a lead, the Bills will be eventually forced to throw.

3 BRIGHT LIGHTS

Which team do you think will be able to keep its composure Monday night? The team that leads the NFL in penalties (107) and is coached by the always-emotional Ryan? Or the team that's been in countless primetime games and knows how to handle the extra attention and pressure? Take the Pats and their 106-19 home record since Gillette Stadium opened in 2002.

Aries Financial gain is apparent. Assert your needs and wants without being overbearing. Tact and diplomacy will enable you to charm people.

Taurus Avoid lending and borrowing. Call in loans and pay off as many debts as you can to avoid being left in a compromising position.

Gemini Your innovative concepts will provide you with a new direction. Focus your efforts on what you enjoy doing to end up with a lucrative sideline.

Cancer Don't be content with just getting by with what you have. Educate yourself about topics that are relevant to your profession.

Leo You must be aware of what your competition is doing. It's apparent that someone is trying to undermine your credibility.

Virgo Unanticipated changes within the family will cause emotional distress. Do your best to avoid finding fault or placing blame on others.

Libra Be honest about your feelings and intentions. The time and effort you put into your personal relationships will be proof of your devotion.

Scorpio This is an opportune time to show others what you have to offer. Make the best of any opportunity you get to enhance your self-esteem.

Sagittarius Keep your plans to yourself if you don't want someone else to end up taking credit for your hard work. Someone will let you down.

Capricorn Stay in the background where you can get a better view. Careful timing will ensure that your work will reach a wide and receptive audience.

Aquarius Love is in the stars. You may feel like splurging, but resist the urge to overspend or you will fall short when your monthly bills arrive.

Pisces Showcase your ideas to anyone who can help you move forward professionally. Trying to do everything will be disheartening. EUGENIA LAST
